February 1987

To My Brethren All:

Have I done everything that I could have done to improve myself today?

Have I been as kind, thoughtful, and understanding toward those who have applied to me today?

Have I been as charitable towards those less fortunate than myself today?

These questions and many more have filled my mind and heart often, and I am alarmed when the answer comes back a resounding "NO".

Every task that a person undertakes, or every piece of work he endeavors to perform reflects the perfection which is instinctive to the human species, and although we sometimes fall short of the perfection we desire, our nature drives us to revive from adversity, to ward off trouble, and to appreciate our prosperity.

In the past few weeks, we have had a few of our Brethren return after long periods of absence, with a revived spirit of being serviceable to their lodge.

This small token on their behalf has brought about some feelings of encouragement to myself, as well as to the officers of this Lodge, which I hope will result in a better preparation of our candidates, together with the vigor that a stronger foundation always supplies.

Fraternally,

GARY R. LAWSON, Worshipful Master
