March 1987

To My Brethren All:

Recently, I had an opportunity to observe an operative mason working at his trade.

Although at times his job was quite difficult and demanding, he demonstrated some very specific and peculiar characteristics (associated with the Craft) while involved in his labor.

He appeared to perform his work with a great deal of joy and knowledge of the task he was assuming.

Every movement seemed to demonstrate great skill and precision, as the symphony of his work progressed.

The longer I observed his work, the more I began to wonder, how much easier it would be for us as speculative masons, if we were to perform our duties and responsibilities in a manner which reflected the joy, knowledge, precision and expertise that he so aptly demonstrated.

Any task that is undertaken, should be performed to the best of our ability; Whatever knowledge is required, should demand our full and complete attention.

Every lesson when properly learned, tends to make a richer and fuller life for each and every one of us.

Fraternaly,

GARY R. LAWSON, Worshipful Master
