

June 1993

Brethren:

The days are getting longer and summer break draws near. The kids will be getting out of school soon, taking swimming lessons, going to summer camp. Much of what they have learned doing the school year will be forgotten as bike riding and cookouts once again take precedence over math and history. The first weeks of summer will be filled with things to do, and school will seem a million miles away.

Don't be fooled, however. By the end of July, these will be the same kids who will have run out of things to do. You might overhear on one of these days: "But mom, there is nothing on TV and I gave been to Great Adventure already. Billy's at the shore with his family. There's nothing to do, and I'M BORED!"

For these kids, August and the start of school will bring a chance to see their friends, to catch up with each other, to start football and band practice. The structured days will not seem as confining as they did on those muggy May afternoons when they yearned and strained for the three o'clock bell.

We masons, too, have a break coming up — no meetings, no events, no sub sales, no church gatherings to attend. But unlike the kids on summer break, we must make constructive use of our recess. The principals we learn during the year don't drop out of existence during the summer months. The brotherhood is a twelve-month-a-year commitment, and should be practiced as such. I'd like to offer each of you a challenge to gain a new prospective on the coming summer break.

While you have this extra time on your hands recognize the opportunity to prepare something to offer the lodge in the fall — a memorized reading, for instance, or a future project. Just don't let your minds be idle. Be ever aware that you are a mason, and that daily application of the principals of freemasonry is vital not only to your individual experience in the brotherhood, but to the brotherhood itself.

We would be amiss in our responsibilities and our commitment if we were to each take a two month vacation. Let us plan to use this time with thoughtful and diligent efforts, so that when we return in the fall, we may unite a more cohesive and directed group, each with something unique to offer.

Fraternally yours,
E. Lee Myers
Worshipful Master
