October 1988

Brethren:

In the closing ceremonies of our Lodge meetings, we are charged to be diligent, prudent, temperant and discreet.

The diligence of our labor is reflected in the good work which Masonry performs.

The prudence is hopefully unrestricted, and enables us to endure.

The gentleness of the Craft, and its basic support, is preserved by the temperance we employ, and . . .

discretion, enables us to remain independent and strong.

If attention is paid to the accomplishment of these four charges, the strength of Masonry and its preservation can never be in doubt.

Necessarily, it would have to follow that the observance of the principles of consideration, honesty, friendship, and charity would also go hand in hand.

To be considerate of a Brothers feelings is part of our Heritage, and should be preserved.

To be straight-forward and sincere should reflect the basic honesty we hope to maintain.

The friendship that we now enjoy is all important, for no accomplishment is fulfilled when animosity is present, and . . . when the monetary value of charity is removed, and replaced by regard of each others concerns, genuine harmony results.

Ancient charges, and modern considerations can work hand in hand, and will enable this Great Brotherhood to continue and survive.

Fraternally,
GARY R. LAWSON
